How Congress Can Partner with the States on a Federal Balanced Budget Amendment

By Nick Dranias

Introduction

49 states have balanced budget or debt limit requirements in their constitutions, statutes or case law. This policy looks especially prescient today, with Greece and Puerto Rico on the edge of economic collapse due to poor fiscal controls and excessive borrowing. Unfortunately, efforts to advance a federal Balanced Budget Amendment have been focused on urging Congress to deploy its direct amendment proposal power under Article V of the U.S. Constitution, which requires the support of two-thirds of each House. Of course, the problem is that Congress has never reached the necessary threshold with any of its proposed Balanced Budget Amendments. But that is not a reason to give up when it comes to championing a federal Balanced Budget Amendment. There is another way. Congress can partner with the states on the issue. Specifically, Congress could pass a concurrent resolution, such as H.Con.Res. 26 (see Appendix), to set in motion an interstate compact to advance and ratify a federal Balanced Budget Amendment, such as the Compact for a Balanced Budget.

How to Partner with the States

By passing H.Con.Res. 26, Congress would yield to the states’ leadership in advancing a federal Balanced Budget Amendment through the Compact for a Balanced Budget. The Compact for a Balanced Budget is an interstate agreement currently existing among Alaska, Georgia, Mississippi and North Dakota. The Compact advances and ratifies a federal Balanced Budget Amendment in one bill — a single legislative action — passed by 38 state legislatures. It is able to advance a federal Balanced Budget Amendment because it deploys the power to organize a convention for proposing amendments under Article V of the U.S. Constitution. The Compact commits its member states to the entire constitutional amendment process in advance, so that the proposal of a specific, pre-drafted federal Balanced Budget Amendment is voted up or down within 24 hours at the convention it organizes. The use of a formal agreement to define and deploy the convention mode of proposing amendments ensures that this otherwise untested process enjoys the benefit of centuries of case law enforcing interstate compacts.

Using conditional enactments to ensure that it only goes “live” at the right time, H.Con.Res. 26 simultaneously calls the Article V convention contemplated by the Compact (effective if and when at least three-fourths of the states join the Compact) and selects legislative ratification of the Compact’s contemplated federal Balanced Budget Amendment (effective if and when the amendment is proposed by the Compact-organized convention).
Additionally, passing H.Con.Res. 26 gives implied consent to the Compact for a Balanced Budget; thus providing a fallback position to defend the Compact for a Balanced Budget if a court were to wrongly rule that it requires Article I, Section 10 congressional consent.

Just like any other concurrent resolution, Congress has the power to pass H.Con.Res. 26 with simple majorities and without Presidential presentment. This is because H.Con.Res. 26 simply ensures that Congress follows its own mandatory constitutional call and ratification referral duties when the requisite legal thresholds are met. Although Congress may have only a few incidental powers associated with its exclusive convention call and ratification referral duties, certainly those duties include the power to ensure Congress performs its own mandatory constitutional obligations when the time comes.

Further, passage of H.Con.Res. 26 would not implicate the need for Presidential presentment. This is because the Supreme Court has ruled the President has no role in Article V. Although this ruling was issued in connection with the direct congressional proposal of amendments, it applies with more force to H.Con.Res. 26 because the procedural act of calling a convention for proposing amendments or selecting a mode of ratification is even less like “making law,” which requires Presidential presentment, than is directly proposing an amendment. In substance, H.Con.Res. 26 merely exercises power conferred exclusively by the Constitution on Congress to usher along a state-initiated and consummated constitutional amendment process.

Conclusion

The bottom line is that the goal of achieving a federal Balanced Budget Amendment has finally been made achievable through the mechanism of passing a congressional concurrent resolution to activate a corresponding interstate compact.

Support for the necessary congressional concurrent resolution does not imply support for the substance of the amendment advanced by the Compact for a Balanced Budget, it merely affirms a commitment by Congress to following its constitutional duties when the necessary legal thresholds are met.

Of course, the federal Balanced Budget Amendment advanced by the Compact for a Balanced Budget is worthy of support on the merits. It strongly limits the borrowing capacity of the federal government and otherwise restricts spending at all times to tax-derived cash-on-hand. The amendment encourages spending reductions before tax increases to close deficits. It does this by requiring supermajority approval for new or increased income or sales taxes, while retaining the current simple majority rule for revenue measures that will cause the least harm (and generate the most political pushback), such as eliminating tax loopholes and replacing the income tax with a consumption tax. To handle national emergencies without easy evasion of fiscal restraint, the amendment includes four “release valves:” (1) a 5% cushion of additional borrowing capacity above the total national debt on ratification, allowing for an orderly transition to balanced budgets; (2) the ability to free up borrowing capacity for emergency spending by paying down the national debt; (3) a provision requiring the President to enforce the limit on borrowing capacity and reprioritize spending to address emergencies through spending impoundments that are subject to simple majority override by Congress to prevent abuse; and (4) a provision giving Congress the ability to obtain an increase in its borrowing capacity with the approval of a simple majority of state legislatures within 60 days of the request—ensuring a transparent, decentralized debate over debt policy.

In short, the federal Balanced Budget Amendment advanced by the Compact for a Balanced Budget would provide a glide path to balanced budgets, stop intergenerational injustice, and prevent unsustainable spending and taxes. That’s a great reason for Congress to commit to doing its constitutional duty under Article V.

This title does not take effect until Congress receives a certified conforming copy of the Balanced Budget Amendment, as defined by the Compact for a Balanced Budget and described herein, evidencing that the convention for proposing amendments under article V of the United States Constitution organized thereunder has approved and proposed the same for ratification.

SEC. 202. REFERRAL TO LEGISLATURES OF THE SEVERAL STATES FOR RATIFICATION.

Upon the effective date of this title, be it resolved by the House of Representatives of the United States (the Senate Concurring), that the following article has been proposed as an amendment to the Constitution of the United States by a convention for proposing amendments under article V of the United States Constitution, which shall be valid to all intents and purposes as part of the Constitution when ratified by the legislatures of three-fourths of the several States within seven years after the date of its submission for ratification:

"ARTICLE—

"SECTION 1. Total outlays of the Government of the United States shall not exceed total receipts of the Government of the United States at any point in time unless the excess of outlays over receipts is financed exclusively by debt issued in strict conformity with this article.

"SECTION 2. Outstanding debt shall not exceed authorized debt, which initially shall be an amount equal to 105 percent of the outstanding debt on the effective date of this article. Authorized debt shall not be increased above its aforesaid initial amount unless such increase is first approved by the legislatures of the several States as provided in section 3.

"SECTION 3. From time to time, Congress may increase authorized debt to an amount in excess of its initial amount set by section 2 only if it first publicly refers to the legislatures of the several States an unconditional, single subject measure proposing the amount of such increase, in such form as provided by law, and the measure is thereafter publicly and unconditionally approved by a simple majority of the legislatures of the several States, in such form as provided respectively by State law; provided that no inducement requiring an expenditure or tax levy shall be demanded, offered or accepted as a quid pro quo for such approval. If such approval is not obtained within 60 calendar days after referral then the measure shall be deemed disapproved and the authorized debt shall thereby remain unchanged.

“SECTION 4. Whenever the outstanding debt exceeds 98 percent of the debt limit set by section 2, the President shall enforce said limit by publicly designating specific expenditures for impoundment in an amount sufficient to ensure outstanding debt shall not exceed the authorized debt. Said impoundment shall become effective 30 days thereafter, unless Congress first designates an alternate impoundment of the same or greater amount by concurrent resolution, which shall become immediately effective. The failure of the President to designate or enforce the required impoundment is an impeachable misdemeanor. Any purported issuance or incurrence of any debt in excess of the debt limit set by section 2 is void.

“SECTION 5. No bill that provides for a new or increased general revenue tax shall become law unless approved by a two-thirds roll call vote of the whole number of each House of Congress. However, this requirement shall not apply to any bill that provides for a new end user sales tax which would completely replace every existing income tax levied by the Government of the United States; or for the reduction or elimination of an exemption, deduction, or credit allowed under an existing general revenue tax.

“SECTION 6. For purposes of this article, ‘debt’ means any obligation backed by the full faith and credit of the Government of the United States; ‘outstanding debt’ means all debt held in any account and by any entity at a given point in time; ‘authorized debt’ means the maximum total amount of debt that may be lawfully issued and outstanding at any single point in time under this article; ‘total outlays of the Government of the United States’ means all expenditures of the Government of the United States from any source; ‘total receipts of the Government of the United States’ means all tax receipts and other income of the Government of the United States, excluding proceeds from its issuance or incurrence of debt or any type of liability; ‘impoundment’ means a proposal not to spend all or part of a sum of money appropriated by Congress; and ‘general revenue tax’ means any income tax, sales tax, or value-added tax levied by the Government of the United States excluding imposts and duties.

“SECTION 7. This article is immediately operative upon ratification, self-enforcing, and Congress may enact conforming legislation to facilitate enforcement.”.
